5. NEW BUSINESS

Future Planning for Greeley Golf Courses - Phill Taylor presented his thoughts on the future planning of Greeley Golf. The ideas included facilities the City could alter and sell to fund revamping Highland Hills Golf Course and a new 27-hole course. Mr. Gillum suggested that the board develop two or three ideas and present them to the city planners. There is a need to expand the golf opportunities for the communities. Mr. Colling will share the suggestions with Diana Frick, Culture, Parks, and Recreation Director, and see where they go from there. He will bring in someone from the Planning Department to share plans for the City. Adam Klett shared the Berry Dunn website so the board members could take the survey.

Restaurant Review—Kim Spencer shared that some people sent her links about Bogies not having a health inspection yet this year. Most of the issues were resolved except for the flies. Other problems include smoking too close to the door, over-serving alcohol, and rowdy crowds. Patti Brug added Bogies has old tables stacked around the building, feeding the squirrels, issues in the ladies' room, and broken tables stacked around the building and in the hall. Chris Colling will speak to both facilities. Due to his experience with food, he completes monthly inspections. He mentioned that both restaurants received a one-year extension on their contracts in April and May.
